Beware Phishing Scams in Amazon Listings

Be careful what you click: There's a new phishing scam hitting Amazon listings that look like legitimate deals, offering great prices on “used – like new” electronics.

After adding the super-discounted electronics to your cart, if you try to check out with your items, you'll be told that the item – suddenly! – is no longer available.

The merchant will then contact you by email, claiming that it was all some kind of mistake and that the item is still available conveniently at a rather Amazon-esque link in their email. But that link, as you might suspect, is a fake, created to look like a legitimate Amazon payment site.
